

Feeding the Wolves

Dear Readers,

A scrap of literature gave me an example of truth expressed in simple language. From the USA but I think many readers will be interested.

A Cherokee Indian tells his grandson of a battle we have inside us. It is a battle between two wolves; one is evil, the other good. Thinking this over the boy asks: "Which wolf wins?" To this the old man replies: "The one you feed!"

I re-tell this as an excellent example of simplified truth; an art lost to Christianity as faith in truth was turned to religion of man. Man finds it easier to use words than understand in depth.

Feeding evil is now epidemic! It turns many away from love of truth and the spirit of ideas and ideals. Without spirit, words become nonsense. Good and evil is reflected in the seven sins we feed.

Jesus did not teach religion, He acknowledged religion because he knew that while the arrogant were in charge they would maintain their authority by maintaining this power base. Though they would deform the truth that would be regained when understanding developed.

Human intellectual strength has grown; we can begin to see the meaning of faith in truth. Don't ever leave faith to stand-alone, as without truth it has no moral base. If leaders of religion talk of love or faith without attention to truth then you know that they have little interest in the one they claim as leader.

As Scriptures say of rain: so also religions, love, and faith; all serve equally well both good and evil.

Today leaders commit to murder and mayhem! They sell basic weaponry to be used knowing how it will be used. Then they attack (in modern terms) defenceless nations, in claim of fighting the terrorism they themselves have encouraged.

The energy wasted on production of armaments and their use would so easily have financed new clean technology – technology that was always available. But of course we, the people, cannot expect to have honest government so long as we avoid our responsibilities and elect those who feed our devils rather than our needs.

We complain of injustice to feel good while we live by lies. If you, unknowingly, met our leaders you might think: "What arrogant people; these are about as wise as computers obeying fingers! They reveal this daily, yet we elect them to run/ruin our lives!"

Why do we elect people who want the glory of public authority but cannot earn honest community respect for integrity and management skill?

We are talking of both religion and politics. These, secretly hand-in-hand, combine their horns of influence to control morals through mass media.

It is easy to see that the morality of nations is controlled by the anti-life having us elect their representatives to our parliaments. They use Hegelian Dialectic principals of divide and conquer to gain desired outcomes; these include "outcomes based education".

As revealed in GNIEB><BEING the power of the anti-life rests with ownership of the banking system under control of the great whore of commerce.

So it's easy to see why we have commerce without morals, religion with fake morals, and politics amoral. WHY do we refuse our responsibility to choose good people, with proven management abilities and honest reputation to govern us?

It's not as if we can't form committees to find good candidates! It's not illegal in any democracy! Nor would many candidates, chosen in this way, refuse! It's not the electoral choice, it's the pushing themselves forward and telling lies good people refuse. We need honest responsibility to feed our healthy needs.

How pleasant life would be if we just fed our good intentions and ignored the evasive appeals of arrogance and irresponsibility.
