YOUR LIFE - 1: "LEFT for DEAD"

"Left for Dead" is a book. As a teenager, I read of a man who had made an important human discovery but needed time to explain it. Well he neglected his health for his work; death won. I decided then, that would not happen to me.

However I saw early that my heart, at times, seemed to have a mind of its own. As I aged, its 'individuality' has increased but doctors have no answer so, when having an 'office' clean-up I came across "Left for Dead" about a man with a family history of heart failures and himself has a heart attack at age 42, I decided to read it.

We by-pass the preliminaries and gory details to this paragraph in part 2. Quote: "Truly a remarkable performance by remarkably skilled people working together like a precision drilled team, in an extraordinarily equipped operating theatre at a cost of many dollars and much pain. Too bad it doesn't help the patient."

Then this comment at time of his six-month check-up: "I couldn't believe he would suggest something that had already failed and left me an invalid. ... I told him I was not coming along fine as he had told me over and over; I was dying. ... Something had to be done now. Something new."

"What do you expect he indignantly demanded. They took your heart out of your chest, stopped it, cut it and sewed on it. You can't expect it to run right."

I was an ignorant fool to expect to be "as good as new" just because he told me I would be. ... Important people like him can lie any time they want." ... "I had counted on him. ... Go away and die. He [now] seemed to say. I was left for dead. I was shocked and angry. ...

" I was a failure because I was dying. He wanted to sell another angiogram and bypass It didn't work the first time and I was too disgusted to ever consider it again. "At that moment ... I realized it was entirely up to me to heal myself." End Quote.

Well Dick had been told about Cayenne Pepper during his convalescence but had dismissed it as nonsense. How could a simple grocery item be relevant, he had access to the greatest medical system in the world and its dedicated carers? But that was then; he now saw the Emperor in true nakedness, what had he to lose? On his way home he bought a can of Cayenne Red Pepper for 69cents at the general store and, at home, filled three [gelatine] capsules and swallowed them.

Well, to cut this story short the Cayenne worked like magic and after about 14 years of normal life and study of herbs he wrote this book. He knows that all people are different; that plants differ. But he also knows that nature offers all the nutrients we need for a healthy life; we just have to find what we are missing.

Question 1: Why does the medical system not teach doctors about the base for healthy life: Natural nutrition?

Question 2: Why does the government empower agencies to outlaw natural health-remedies? Why favour unnatural chemical compounds (drugs) that are dangerous or at least, over long use, unhealthy? Why is unhealthy medication being forced on us?

We now find, and I don't need quote from the book, that government agencies such as the FDA are, after years of effort, making headway in Europe, the USA and nations of the old British Empire, to force herbs to be listed as drugs and so have them come under control of the agencies wanting them outlawed.

The criminals are gaining authority over the food of life, obviously, not for sharing. Political authorities are giving increasing powers to pharmaceutical industry; agencies such as the FDA are being given life/death power over us. Dick Quinn has this to say of it.

"I had a double coronary bypass about 14 years ago – four times longer than a bypass is supposed to last.

The comedian Jackie Gleason had his first bypass the day I had mine. He subsequently had three more. Then he died. The poor man. He had so much money they cut him to death. According to "modern medicine" I should be dead by now, but I am very much alive thanks entirely to "ancient medicine".

My bypass was actually a failure from the very first. It closed within a week. Herbs reopened my arteries and saved my life. I bet my life on Cayenne in 1978, and won health and energy. I won freedom from debilitating, expensive, addictive drugs and from impotence, constipation, depression and pain. I've escaped angina, headaches, leg cramps and flu. ... Drugs haven't damaged my kidneys.

If I die tomorrow, that's OK. I'm already a winner. ... Its my miracle. ... I make the decisions because I'm doing the dying. I have a right to the information I need to make those decisions, but there are powerful businesses and government people who want to deny me that right. They don't want you to know either. But I'll tell you. ...No human being in any position has the right or authority to deny me knowledge and medicines I need for my own health. Certainly not a government agency like the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. ...

"Your doctor should study herbs in medical school ... but that won't happen. It costs important people too much money to save the lives of people like you and me For a couple of years after my operation, I got letters from the hospital asking, in effect, if I was dead yet. I answered every one with my message about Cayenne. They weren't interested. I realized then that we patients and victims must care for ourselves because the care-taking establishment doesn't care.

Coronary bypass surgery happens in America 380,000 times every year [1992] because its incredibly profitable. Most patients have health insurance that pays about $40,000 per hit. With any kind of complications, the sky's the limit. It's a dream business opportunity. Everyone benefits but you, the patient. You are a very valuable piece of meat. They don't want you to go to the health store for treatment. ...

[Editor: for myself I have rejected at least two prescription medications subsequently banned and others that are reported to cause bad side effects.]

It was fortuitous I stopped using the Diazide ... A1991 study showed ... actually causes heart attack. In 1981 I found the book "Capsicum" by Dr. John Christopher. Christopher was a genius from Utah who discovered incredible things Cayenne can do and used it as the primary ingredient in his herbal formulations. ...

Improved circulation is the key to better health in many ways ... Cayenne improves circulation all over the body.

Nutrition is the basis for the prevention of illness, and herbs are the most nutritious of all foods ... you can take them every day forever." End Q.

Well that is the message. The Quinn book, you can buy it on the Internet. It also tells about other herbs. Our site includes information about health and culture because if we are to save ourselves from a criminal NWO then we need our health and we need understand our social situation. As Thomas Jefferson said: "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free it expects what never was and never will be."

We are deceived to misunderstand the nature of our creation so we live contrary to our true nature. If we continue this, what are the natural consequences?

Let's connect with intelligence: Why do governments (world wide) so blatantly support commerce and give the worst of its crimes protection of law – make illegal some drugs that maim, addle the brain, addict and kill but legalise others that do the same!

Why do they also allow promotion of deceitful information that does even worse damage! People are deceived to act against their own best interests even to the extent of war's mass murder – by deceit we are led to sickness, and self-destruction.

Is it really money-talk or love of power? Have you ever wanted to stand for parliament? Despite that you might make a good representative and can see that those in parliament lie to and deceive you, chances are your answer is no. Why? Is it because you just don't want the responsibility or because you are not an arrogant or pushy type? Or because hunger for power and position is not in your make-up?

Whatever! You are (most likely) like most people. If you can help some-one in trouble you are pleased to do so. You would not knock down and rob even if starving. A lot of people are like that and a lot not like that; murder is not confined to the poor.

Are those who push for power and authority over others the kind we should elect?

So why do we elect the worst? It's not compulsory! Is there a law in any country to say that you have to vote for the best liar who pushes forward?

The Australian Constitution REQUIRES that the people CHOOSE their representative and in any country calling itself a democracy there can be no law to deny this right! We are not put in jail for organising to elect one of our more intelligent and trustworthy members – we just don't do it.

Why do we choose the fake even when the true is lawfully required? Have we become brainwashed into incompetence? Do we feel good thinking our party will rob or disadvantage others on our behalf? Most of us now know that the parties work for international finance; why is it that we just can't bring ourselves to break old habits? Why do we ignore consequences?

Well scriptures tell us that to be wise we must look to both the old and the new. This is because all creation is organised out of chaos by intelligence. We cannot create a viable progress unless we use our intelligence to create in the truth of our own creation; so: Intelligence grows with use!

YOUR LIFE – 2: The Stockholm Syndrome trap.

In Part 1 we found a strong link between sickness and politics. When we see advanced nations work in unison we are seeing that our governments represent a Hydra-headed International government.

So now to some political history to see how we were herded into this corner. Why do we trust political parties? Why do we fail to act on problems dangerous to our future even though we know of them? Knowing is a primitive-level understanding, to improve understanding we look to history. The U.S.A. was part of the original British Empire and though families argue we find our Democratic rights live in a common heritage.

Is true democracy possible? Our first 'democratic' parliament, formed in 1295 by King Edward 1st of England. It became known as the "model parliament" as it became the model for those following.

Our political parties began in the reign of Charles 11, 1630-85. It was not all-downhill from there but we became mentally conditioned to see party loyalties as side-taking tribal loyalties. Consequences only became obvious by 1940; today imminent social disaster is clear.

In USA Republican democracy began in 1787. Those who framed the Constitution seemed aware of the threat from factions, nevertheless party subversion began with the introduction of parties in 1797: (Webster's new reference Library).

One of the factions, called "Democratic Republicans", could have marked the beginning of the modern party system where two parties work (Hegelian Dialectic) under a secret head to manipulate the public rather than act as genuinely separate factions?

In Australia Federation was incorporated in 1901 with proclamation of The Constitution. By that time parties were already operating in State Parliaments but most States had about thirty years of party-free government up to 1890. Nevertheless the Australian Constitution made no mention of parties and we need not doubt its founders were aware of the evil reputation of parties.

Examples: Roman historian Livy, some 2000 years ago: "The struggle between parties is and will always remain, a worse misfortune for the people than war, famine, plague or other manifestation of God's wrath."

Or, "Plato: The Laws". When offices are filled competitively, the winners take over the affairs of state so completely that they totally deny the losers ... share of power. Each side passes its time in narrow scrutiny of the other, ... Of course our position is that this kind of arrangement is far from being a genuine political system; we maintain that laws which are not established for the good of the whole state are bogus laws, and when they favour particular sections of the community, their authors are not citizens but party men

Roman Emperor Diocletian: on elitism "Raging greed blazes on without limit and, with no respect for mankind, races after its own gains and profits ... the sole desire of these insatiably greedy men is to disregard completely the public good." That Emperor would know! What a great description of Globalism with its even-handed manipulation through 'opposing forces' as per the "Hegelian Dialectic" system of public control now so happily combined with the manipulative power of: commerce.

In days when our National Constitutions were formed, educated men still learned of these things. However founder's efforts failed, democracy in Australia was also bypassed within twenty years by introduction of party system government.

We adopt parties because they offer to rob other factions on our behalf. Social indoctrination excuses and eyes are closed to consequences. Just choose the party claiming to represent your interests (your tribe) and leave it to them. Shallow morality, lies and criminal behaviour does not worry us; we are encouraged by the drifting standards of those we elect: greed and immorality becomes an infused way of life.

So our behaviour became fitted to the belief that there is no Creator and no meaning to life. Given careful dumbing down we accept tribal confines. To advance we need faith in truth's living rewards; remember: Christian is a living faith in truth as against death in religious dogma.

Yes primitive tribal emotion is used to maintain our dependence on self-serving leaders! "Humanism" now carries this as a disguise for human in loyal service of Communist, Capitalist, Fascist or other form of totalitarian control. World ownership is an ancient dream; social-class division and pillage of wealth keep the dream alive.

Let's repeat a quote from "Indian Philosophy" by Radhakrishnan: "One of the leading principles of the mystics was the sacredness and secrecy of self knowledge and the true knowledge of the gods. This wisdom was, they thought, unfit for, perhaps even dangerous to, the ordinary human mind; or in any case, liable to perversion and misuse, and loss of virtue if revealed to the vulgar and unpurified spirits. Hence they favored the existence of an outer worship, effective but imperfect, for the profane."

Arrogant leaders reject their humanity! With the lock of primitive emotion they cage us securely in beliefs of ignorance even today in this age of reason.

The Stockholm Syndrome:

As seen with Global Warming, the muddle and deceit of present level media discussion makes no real sense until we look back to where the present threat had its origin to see what the cover-up is about.

So now let's look at an example in relevant modern history: The "Stockholm Syndrome" as readers may, if only vaguely, recall, highlighted the seeming strange behaviour of hostages after an incident in Stockholm (1973). A botched bank robbery resulted in hostages who did not seek release and who subsequently tried to defend their captors.

The "Stockholm Syndrome" was so named because of this incident but that behaviour, strange though it may seem, is not unusual. In fact "battered wives" display a similar strange need to be loyal to abusive husbands and often resist appeals to escape or take other defensive action.

Most common of all, we refuse to accept actions, experience and reason when it shows 'our' government to be promoting our cultural demise.

We refuse to act as individuals because we love the power of the mob to rob those disadvantaged. We reject the advantages of intelligent behaviour for emotion of primitive greed and needs that date from tribal security.

The syndrome could be more correctly called the "Tribal Loyalty Syndrome". Many people, if captured by forces that they feel are too dangerous to resist, admire the animal strength and seek to appease it.

Basic survival instinct.

To understand why people may act as if blind to enslavement, by 'political forces', we need to appreciate the primitive of our nature; once we see this, we may consider our position with human logic and see we are enslaved by emotions now detrimental to human advance and survival.

Though our masters, hiding behind their control of the party system, encourage our emotions, we only need ask: "Why are our leaders of such poor quality", to see manipulation behind the political system.

In an age of reason our safety depends on intelligent regard for truth. Our development gives us new options; survival now depends on using our human intelligence to discard primitive ego driven leaders.

In fear to face our problem we may complain, or protest, or become agitated but the way of escape is to trust our human intellectual abilities – to understand and accept responsibility – to think and act to escape our primitive bonds.

Captivity by dogma has been the fate of almost everyone during the whole of our political maturing. If we think that we are not caught up in some form of slavery (in particular, slavery to implanted beliefs) just look at the different cultures! These represent beliefs; each sets the limits to cultural behaviour and actions. Don't be blinded by variety; all represent dogmas.

In earlier times, when a strong leader emerged the majority would hang back. "How will we live without our masters to feed us? Where will we shelter? Who will protect us?" "How can we govern ourselves without those powerful?" These feelings, encouraged by slave-masters, were often justified concerns; today they are delusions: knowledge is available.

Technology may enslave or liberate – good and evil share life. Today we have a unique opportunity for escape. Today we do have enough knowledge to manage our lives in a way that, even as we begin, would serve to us a better future than will our slavery.

We now have an alternative to leaving our children in the shadow world of half-life! To death in false service and ignorance of what might have been. Today our access to knowledge means we no longer need rely on animal instinct. We have human potential and loyalty should be to humanity.

Let's recall an item of wisdom from Thomas Szasz; quote: Every act of conscious learning requires the willingness to suffer an injury to one's self-esteem. That is why young children, before they are aware of their own self-importance, learn so easily; and why older persons, especially if vain or important, cannot learn at all.

YOUR LIFE – 3: A Surgeon Reports

Recall Thomas Szasz! It is difficult to sacrifice ideas on which we have based our lives – worse, when our arrogance is encouraged by cultural forces rather than subdued! When our philosophy denies truth but leaders claim it our convictions have no survival value. So let's understand: it is our human ability to self-sacrifice that leads to wisdom.

Self-sacrifice (of belief to better understanding) is the fuel of intellect. Our ability to sacrifice desire of instinct or conviction of dogma, for intellectual strength, reveals our humanity. Politics is high on our list of primitive loyalties but to see with the eye of reason gives freedom from base instinct and we grow in humanity.

My grandfather, who sailed the oceans, told me that in China, people paid their doctor to keep them healthy. When sick they stopped paying until made well again. Today, in our 'advanced' cultures we pay government for health care; government pays the medical system and the "cause and effect link" is broken.

Accessing medical services paid by government we feel good, we paid our taxes and now benefit; the doctor the same; he serves who pays, not who is paid for – just as the MP serves who offers him power not who votes for him.

My grandfather also told another story: "One day when a plumber was busy a customer made an urgent call about a leaking roof. The apprentice went and fixed it. The master chastised his apprentice: "That woman has been paying me every year for ten years to fix her roof, you now fix it so good it will probably be ten years before we get another call".

The lesson: no matter if we are a plumber, doctor, or politician, little dishonesties are easily seen as perks of the job and the bigger the pay and more important the position the bigger the perks. So when our culture changes the base for our beliefs to delete morals of truth, and justice serves law, then add-on effects soon become beyond our ability to service!

But the bad news is, when the ego-driven gain world government power they need no longer be concerned for the welfare of the slave things. So who is deleted when waste of resources, pollution and over population is ruining 'their' world for 'their' families?

Who is surprised that President Carter signed that population control agreement in 1980. Can you wonder that this has been neither rescinded nor publicised – never been put to public referendum or proclaimed – or wonder that dumbing down has been greatly intensified since that date?

So from large auto-makers in the USA to pub owners in outback Australia come daily reports of catastrophic social consequences resulting from foolish decisions by people in every walk of life – law-makers, business managers, bus drivers, nurses – all add to social distress and hardship.

Why? Because our ability to reason is confused, our primitive nature has been reinforced by promotion of emotional distractions. If we see in open-mouthed amazement, minds close quickly in denial if we don't like what we saw; our leaders know what they are doing and would not betray us.

We watch and we hear public debate; we believe it is serious, not distracting entertainment. We are told that both sides of each discussion must be displayed equally because all opinions are equal! We ignore that the equality is in the deceit. To the poorly educated all opinion really is meaningless to intelligent action.

Meaningful discussion can be based only on truth; both sides then look to learn. With debate today neither side listens to the other, no conclusion is required or reached.

Now: "MY LIFE as a SURGEON"

Of hospitals: inefficiency, dedication, exhaustion and tedium. A Surgeon reveals some frustrations.

*"The weekend resident surgery shift at the Victoria Hospital * lasted just that – the weekend 'Work and 'not work' seemed to blur and you were constantly tuned to your ever-present companion, the beeper.*

The residents of previous years had discovered a small cupboard in the respiratory lab where someone had set up a camp-bed. Unfortunately, we shared the room with the blood gas analysis machine.

Whirr, whirr, whirr, beep, tush, tush, tush, dit dit dit... It lasted perhaps 10 seconds, but long enough to wake the dead. Every 10 minutes it sprang to life, calibrating its measures and printing out a report on a dot-matrix printer. The noise cut through the night and pierced your existence.

The machine seemed to have a life of its own and, having been stuck in the cupboard all its life, was vengeful. Its sole aim, apart from predicting life and death among the patients whose blood it analysed, was to keep any resident who thought they could catch a few minutes' sleep during their marathon shift from doing so. I had gone around the wards making sure every last request from the night-shift nurses had been attended to: Panadol for bed 4, a sleeping tablet for bed 6. Bed 9 needed ... antibiotics and it had to be given by a doctor. By the end of the first day there was inevitably a dull ache in my knees that often gave way to shin splints and then shot straight up into hip pain. Migraines were a common occurrence for me and I would be constantly popping anti-migraine tablets.

By midnight even the smallest request seemed immensely tedious. No brain power was required for most of a resident's work, so it was possible to keep going on and on, from charting tablets to admitting patients to the ward, from giving the first dose of antibiotics to pronouncing people dead. It was all stuff that could be done by the brain-dead, which was what we became after the first 36 hours of our shift.

Nurses could make life hell or heaven. If you had a shift of experienced and sensible nurses then life was easy. The alternative was the nurse straight out of university, who saw herself as the custodian of quality, the barometer of good care in our hospital system. The majority of these ... were bureaucrats rather than carers ... the new breed, the norm.

In old days, nurses trained in hospital. They had breaks to rapidly imbibe theoretical knowledge, then returned to the hospital to learn from the best educational system ... invented – workplace training. They learnt and absorbed from those with more experience and more skill. Slowly, they taught others

. ... By the time they graduated they had seen a lot of illness and health and certainly knew what a nurse does for a living.

In today's university ... educational scheme, the nurse spends a lot of time being taught to be compassionate (as if this is a skill that can be taught). They do a multitude of role-playing activities and video each other in simulated patient interactions. They study behavioural sciences, pharmacology, anatomy, physiology, biochemistry and come out knowing very little about what it is to be a nurse...

They are told that they ... are the controller of quality. No one tells them that they are actually the difference between life and death for patients.

Hospital-trained nurses knew that making a bed without creases meant that bedsores were minimised. Bedsores could turn into ... infections. University nurses feel it is beneath them to make beds. ... The hospital trained nurses knew that rolling a patient over, washing them thoroughly, cutting their toenails, feeding them and caring for their wounds prevent complications that could result in significant morbidity or death. Many university nurses feel that filling out the latest quality-assurance survey, making sure the notes are up-to-date and taking their breaks on time are paramount.

... what university does not teach them, is that patients are "nursed", not "doctored" back to good health. It is no secret that the experienced, hospital-trained nurses in theatres are life-saving to both the trainee surgeon and the patient. There is nothing so lonely as operating in the middle of the night when you are slightly uncomfortable and yet do not want to disturb the sleep of the specialist in charge. The experienced nurses help you. "Doctor ... usually uses a figure-of-eight stitch for this closure," they might say with a knowing look.

Some nurses could be absolutely pitiless. Ward rounds used to be a collective effort where the nurses and doctors worked as a team, sharing information about patients and determining the best course of action for an individual. The charge nurse knew everything about the patients –how they had slept, their overnight temperature, the fact that their cousin had visited yesterday ...

Most university nurses see ward rounds as an unnecessary part of their day's activities. Walk into any ward today and ask the nurse sitting behind the counter about a patient's condition. They are unlikely to know. The nurse looking after the patient is on a break, the notes are in the treatment bay, the patient is not in the ward and they do not know where she is.

A compounding problem for this disastrous and failed experiment in nursing education is the system of promotion for nurses in hospitals today.

The only way for a nurse to progress in status and pay is to be promoted to administration. Take a really good clinical nurse. How does the health system reward her? It makes her part of the clipboard brigade. One of the most tragic events I remember in the Victoria Hospital was seeing a great clinical nurse promoted to assistant director of nursing. One night, as I left the hospital through the back entrance, I glanced across at a lit office. There was Sister ..., entering patient occupancy figures into a spreadsheet on the computer. What a waste.

Of course, there are still those nurses who take pride in their work and the care of patients, but their efforts can get lost in a sea of mediocrity and buck-passing.

YOUR LIFE – 4: "Problems, Causes & Solutions"

WHIRR, WHIRR, WHIRR, BEEP, TUSH, My beeper went again. Ward 6. God ... there was a university nurse in charge tonight ... Ward 6 was where the neurosurgical patients were. ... where the long-term comatose patients spent their days being cared for and kept alive despite the fact that their chance of recovery was nil.

Bed after bed of bodies who used to be mothers, fathers, sisters, girlfriends, football heroes were now bedridden, lying in strange and unnatural postures, arms contorted in the classic extended finger and thumb pose ... wrist and the elbow bent. Eyes closed. Mason ..., a 26-year-old former athlete ... The nurse looking after him was one of the new breed ... more interested in the paperwork to be filled out than the patients to be cared for. All she wanted was to be able to put in her notes, "Resident aware". That cleared her of any medicolegal liability in case this blew up into a more complicated situation. It is far more important in these days of medical litigation to ensure that your back is protected before providing quality care.

Making sure the paper trail was complete was, for her, more important than taking responsibility for any decisions.

Mason was running a temperature ... best to report the abnormality,...This way, the resident took responsibility... I examined Mason by the book. ... I needed to do a femoral vein tap. ... Of course Mason did not react. He gave no indication of pain. His brain was too destroyed to monitor a minor infraction upon his body.

I took 20 millilitres of blood and then asked the nurse to put pressure on the site while I emptied the blood into various tubes in measured amounts and labelled each. I looked up to see her leaving the cubicle. "Sorry, I'm on break now," she said from behind the curtain.

I reached across and put pressure on the femoral vein before we ended up with a bruise the size of his thigh. This is the problem with taking blood from this vein: it continues to bleed unless pressure is applied. Ten minutes by the clock. All I could hear was the sound of the various vegetables breathing, most with the assistance of ventilators, nurses feel that filling out the latest quality-assurance survey, making sure the notes are up-to-date and taking their breaks on time are paramount.

There we leave Dr., now Professor Khadra.

You will be pleased to see that this Dr. now has more authority and that Prime Minister Howard is promising to return nursing training to the hospitals if re-elected.

He wasn't, but don't bet on promises, even if re-elected the possibility of any useful upset to the Global/Humanism plot is unimaginable short of a public uprising. So now the response to the Doctor's article, let's see what we can learn from these:

Letter 1, Destruction of Nursing: "I nearly cried reading the [Surgeon's] article 25-26/8. As a registered nurse, who started her apprenticeship 40 years ago, this September, I can so relate to it.

Nursing as such does not exist anymore; it is all paperwork, "clinical pathways" and meetings (to decide on more paperwork). I thought I should cut the article out, highlight the important quotes and hang it in our tearoom, but I soon realized I would have to highlight it all. Of course I am looking at it from a nurses point of view but it proves the flow-on effect to doctors.

He is also spot-on on the issue of promotion of nurses. A few years ago I thought I'd apply for a promotion. I was told that as I had "only" a diploma I would have to be willing to do a degree and be prepared to do rosters and attend meetings – in short, join the clipboard brigade.

I am not against change, as long as it is change for the better, and not just because the bureaucratic pencil pushers are running out of things to conjure up.

Professor's ... article should be compulsory reading for the powers-that-be at universities where they try to train nurses. I feel sorry for the new breed of nurse and I worry about who'll be looking after me. And, though I love what I am doing, I am glad that neither of my daughters has chosen nursing as their calling. S.Q."

Letter 2. "I just can't wait to hear all the screams from all the academic nurses squirming in their academic seats after reading "My life as a Surgeon". I could not agree more ... I have been a nurse for 26 years, hospital trained, and have seen nursing die a very rapid death due to university training. Nurses are no longer taught to nurse.

Very few have any idea how to look after a patient, not to mention the staffing crisis ... Oh well, so long as the academics are happy and have destroyed nursing while supposedly giving it the professional standing it deserves, I guess I should be happy too.

What it has actually done is, in my opinion, destroy the once respected place we had in the community by allowing poorly trained and often dangerous nurses into the health system. E.S.T."

Ed: My view as a patient:

Seventy to eighty years ago I had spells in various hospitals; now over the last eight years I've had four spells in three hospitals. The change is dramatic.

Seventy years ago there were male and female wards: the embarrassment of mixed wards was not forced on the sick. General wards were also bigger and might hold ten or more patients; the ward was able to act as a little community with friendships forming and mutual caring. Nurses at each level were distinguished by uniform; patients knew instantly who was nurse, head nurse, doctor, visitor or cleaner. In our old-time hospital patients knew the nurses and nurses knew patients as well as understood their problems.

Today, more so in larger hospitals, nurses are roster'd around the small wards. Without distinguishing uniforms in under-staffed hospitals, the comfort of friendly care is denied. Pushed out as soon as possible, a patient may never see the same nurse twice.

Everything is now designed impersonal! You never know your attendants as people; they act as programmed robots. They only know you from your 'board' and are too busy maintaining their 'busyness' to have time for that. All comfort of personal trust is gone. You may be rolled onto the wrong side or asked to do things you shouldn't. Night shift nurses may be hired from the labour exchange; overseas backpackers seemed favoured.

I would expect that this factor of "Politically Correct" humanism" would, by itself, reduce the quality and efficiency of nursing by more than 25%. This also applies world wide, huge human effort is wasted in the name of 'Politically Correct' inefficiency.

Old time: everyone and everything was spotless! A big Sydney hospital (within the last ten years) dirt there when I arrived still there a week later, cleaner in, quick swipe at the floor, left. Old days: Matron would have sacked him (or her) on the spot.

But that is only the beginning. My personal experience fits perfectly with what the quoted Dr., the "Left for Dead" author, and the old-time nurses-letters, say. In my Sydney hospital next to me a woman, probably in her sixties with a bit of weight on: while recovering from a hip replacement a fall on a concrete path had broken both wrists.

My hip replacement was not causing pain but having to lie on my back I found very uncomfortable. Sleeping little I would buzz for a nurse if others needed help. One night neighbour needed the toilet.

Nurse, told what was wanted asked, "Can you walk?" Patient: "Yes, if helped to my feet". Helped. Nurse: "Well off you go" (about 8 metres). Nurse starts to tidy the bed. Patient reaches the toilet, unable to open the door calls nurse. Nurse opens the door and helps patient get seated, back to the bed. In a few minutes patient calls nurse back; "I need a wipe" she says". Nurse: "I don't have gloves on, you will have to go as you are."

Faults: Old lady should not have been allowed to walk alone; imagine the disaster had she stumbled. Nurse should have known patient would be unable to open the door and need help at toilet. Gloves in a dispenser by the ward door! I would expect better caring in a third world country. Total lack of foresight is now the norm!

In bed opposite was an immigrant lady. Not speaking our language or the nurses hers, she often didn't seem able to do as the nurses wanted; perhaps in pain, but whatever, they treated her as a trouble-maker. Petty contempt is hard to explain but dogs are treated better. These complaints, 7 years later, seem trivial. Patients in extreme distress now die in waiting rooms while women have miscarriages in waiting-room toilets!

What has caused such change? The above complaints result from the "politically correct" attitudes of the Humanist philosophy now imposed worldwide; many have contempt for it but don't understand its meaning or impact. It pretends multi-cultural caring but the passion we pretend substitutes for less caring. Humanism pretends to be modern but in progress to its ultimate goal sees no difference between human and animal; it pretends science but has no logic in organisation.

Political correctness is imposed in service to an idea of creating a new culture of entirely artificial values to serve an entirely arrogant god establishment and so to destroy the human culture of values based on truth! That's the entire dangerous goal of the present New World Order!

Problems are created; solutions create more problems. There is a place for specialist training for technical efficiency by those wanting advance to administrative positions AFTER learning the fundamentals of the job, its needs and its discipline.

Humanism is an animalist religion; it fights intellectual development. Religions have always served elitism and though some call themselves Christian religions never follow Christian principles so well as they follow dogma and humanist ideals.

Christianity is love of truth; its ideal is to advance in truth. Religion is stick-in-the-mud dogma, its energy must be directed to maintenance of its chosen dogma. Its pretence of humane caring aborts cultural advance.

Christianity foresees the future and gives accurate advice. I.e. "I am the way: I am the truth and I am life; no one comes to the Father except by me." Humanism promotes animal passions to bypass intellectual advance! It aborts progress. We need faith in truth to gain the benefits of our created potential.

YOUR LIFE – 5: Humanity: a development.

The first feedback printed by the newspaper after the Dr's exposure of modern hospital care was the two letters printed in last week's episode. A week later, in the Magazine section, the Uni-trained hit back, but not unopposed, see following letters.

Letters: 1/ Professor K's article displays nostalgia for the "Good old days" when Doctors could tell nurses what to do. [... August 25]. The nursing profession has shaken off this image, being now firmly based on education that teaches them the value of their own professional scope of practice. The days of the apprentice-style nurse training as described by Khadra did little more than provide an ailing health-care system with a cheap workforce. Now that this model of staffing is no longer available it is all too easy to blame the nurses for our health-care woes. Health professionals should put their energies into working together to develop models of care that will best suit the changing needs of patients, not "bagging" each other for their perceived limitations.
Margaret ... Monash; School of nursing.

2/ M. Khadra is right. Many university-educated nurses enter the profession unable or unwilling to actually "nurse". It's time for some sort of compromise to be reached with regard to nursing training. Nurses need more contact with patients during their training so they are cognisant of what the actual job is. Lynne .

3/ I disagree with Professor Khadra's opinions and perceptions of nurses' university education. I teach nursing students, and I can assure him and all of your readers that the education of nurses in universities teaches the best of nursing practice. Nursing students become registered nurses with many attributes when they graduate, including compassion and ethics. Unfortunately it is the health system that forms the graduates into practitioners. So perhaps the Professor should have called these nurses, "nurses trying to nurse in the system" of nurses having to do audits at the expense of nursing." All too often people make assumptions about nursing education at university versus training in hospitals. Nurses need both.

Dr Anita ...Flinders: School of Nursing.

4/ I am a hospital-trained nurse who later in life upgraded my hospital certificate to a university degree. There was absolutely no comparison in the education I received. Hospital nurse training taught us to do as we were told without question. University education teaches nurses to think, to question, to understand why, Not just how. Nursing is a highly respected and compassionate profession and I have been overwhelmed by emails and phone calls from angry nurses following your publication of ... Khadra's article. Jill ... Australian Nursing Federation.

5/ Professor Khadra's book should be compulsory reading for all hospital administrators and politicians.

The need to cover your rear-end for legal reasons was drummed into our nurse educators about 20 years ago, with predictable results. Now, reams of "correct" paperwork by university-trained nurses [apparently needed to convince judges that, if a patient sued, it wasn't the hospital's fault] appear to take precedent over patient care. Ian ... Q'l'd.

6/ Khadra needs to take a reality check: the general public once again this year voted nurses the most trusted of all occupational groups.

Rosemary ... Royal College of Nursing.

7/ ... Khadra's article should have been titled, "Where have all the handmaidens gone". I have never read such a clear indication of the need to completely overhaul medical education, in particular surgical education. Isabelle ... Casuarina, NT.

8/ I walked away from a 26-year nursing career at the end of last year. While I still loved the work and my patients, I hated the system. I worked in a private hospital where the nursing care was, at best, minimal. Staff shortages, equipment shortages, even linen shortages, were things we dealt with regularly.

Thanks for a great article, it has helped me understand that my decision to leave the nursing profession was the right thing to do. Judy ... SA.

Well readers, what do you think; in particular Letter 1? Is it bad to want to maintain standards? (Do you know that the English Magna Carter gave us our rights as we have had them best! New is not always better.) Should nurses share authority with doctors: do their own thing protected from responsibility – did they see less value in their work before their ego was university trained? Was there public complaint of "ailing health systems" before university training?

Old time, health carers served with pride in their work, not in their rights! Was that naive of them? They did not have to spend half their time watching their backs because they spent all their time giving intelligent care to patients they knew and cared about. Suing then unimagined – why now? The humanist philosophy of today is now general! Being more technical, undermining of Surgeon training lags a little. A comment from the USA:

Susan Kansagra, MD Nursing Home Quality; ABC News, 11th September 2007. "The problem 'matters to everybody because you have an entire generation of baby boomers that are suddenly discovering how difficult it is to get decent care to their parents', ... thinking, 'what's going to happen to me?' ... If we can make [the health system] work better for the minority population we can learn how to make it better for everybody."

Humanist philosophy is such a deformity of nature its promoters saw it needed careful introduction; consequences must be made acceptable to the public; those loaded with this deformity needed protection. Inefficiency is integral with the philosophy.

TAKING SIDES: because the "Politically Correct" Humanist religion rejects truth, all debate must appear 'even-handed'; it must pretend; it must imprint feelings of justice where none exist. People must be subtly induced to 'take sides' so nothing is demonstrably proven! Our side/attitude is right; others are enemies! Once committed, loyalty is our life!

Only truth offers rationale for human action, justice and advance: Truth/justice means equality to rights not pretence that all ideas are equal!

What value equality of ignorance? Does it need debate? Look today at world cultures and see: By grace of chance I am: My beliefs are me: by these I live and die.

For reward, read with care.

Blind faith and befuddlement hold us in soul-dead, philosophic dogma. Note: at least three of the letters favouring University training are from nurse-training centres and one from the nurses Federation (Union). But all five in opposition were from practising, hospital trained, nurses. Why so?

We see in those published letters equality of division. Media serves a 'politically correct' agenda. It is inside with the imposed philosophy; it encourages "side-taking" to ignore truth. Befuddlement is the game!

Though we refuse to believe it, when we think for ourselves the logic of truth is overwhelming.

Truth and deceit are not equal values! Lowered standards have, for years, been dumbing-down the commonalty. The well-off see it as advantage to their children; in the middle some worry, even protest; the rest trust 'their party' to care for them as humanity dies.

Dumbing-down is for cultural control – to allow social reform to a private agenda. It ends with self-destruction because the animal body cannot survive without intelligent mind to prepare it for environment outside of its programmed limits. Only intelligence can create and only by intellectual discernment can development continue without drifting into Dead Ends. Service life-forms have no potential for intellectual foresight and self-reform.

Development of Intellect needs challenge and practical understanding of origins. Human upset of environment may destroy us but our true enemy is within. If we want life to survive and advance we must build culture in an order of structural truth.

Human behaviour reveals that our dumbing-down is deliberate. The older nurses learned to communicate efficiently! Now (sedated by false beliefs and humanist pretence) nurses rely on leaders to make their defence. Failure of language in spelling, CAP'S use and grammar is now common and becoming universal.

How many lives must we watch drift to ruin; how many we love, sacrifice; how long deplore what we could prevent, or find in ourselves the will to sacrifice our folly in favour of the truth of our intellectual potential?

Intellectual spirit is developed through challenge! Our creator was not a magician as religions lead us to believe. Our creator must create within the truth of order. Our sufferings reveal our mistakes and pressure us to new effort. True creation must exist within creation's laws of order – that is the revelation now visible as truth in the Christian Testament!

I live, I can learn: you live, you can learn: with trust and faith in the logic of the truth of our being, we can save ourselves. I act on what is clear to me: you have free will to develop the potential of your nature.

Groundwork, before age of seven, is ideally a parental responsibility! But parents, crippled by indoctrinated deceptions, artificial enticements and waste (industry and culture over generations) are overwhelmed by artificial concerns and time wasting non-productive work.

From age seven the main responsibility for learning should be individual. But with potentials limited by universal dogma, our development is deformed.

Animal and human is different. We, born animal, have potential to learn and understand life's laws. We have a spirit of intelligence to grow our being. As we grow our abilities we develop our humanity. As we learn to live in truth, we learn to maintain beliefs in truth. Truth is a vital, but primitive egos undermine human freedom by training in false philosophy. Our situation will decay until truth becomes the base for philosophy.

Philosophy is our base for behaviour; we may call it our religion; it is the starting point for both spiritual and physical development. Until such time as we understand our nature and control our animal instincts, professional religion will turn faith in truth to dogma. Human progress needs freedom and faith of love.

YOUR LIFE – 6: Know your enemy! Find your true self:

It is very difficult for people to come to grips with the fact that we have a world government, and that National Governments give more authority to world government than to State Governments.

The hold of Globalist government over National is formed through power of finance then consolidated through deceit and humanist philosophy. By that is not meant that Globalists believe the false philosophy but that cultural behaviour of leading nations is based on this as a uniting force.

The idea that inhuman planning, to cause the death of millions in their own culture is a result of simple greed for wealth, is not acceptable to reasoning people; philosophy disguises this reality and lack of comforting alternatives give it credibility. This site shows the difficulty of explaining, in logical terms, everything from international to family behaviour, but if we refuse to open our eyes to include Globalist manipulation, then the logic of intellectual explanation remains emotionally unacceptable.

Medical behaviour, to me, is one area where the conflict of reason is most glaring; evidence of bestial contempt for responsibility is visible in so many areas.

Medical services in leading nations have training dominated by 'Big Pharma': (big pharmaceutical companies). So, unless we see that education, like governments, is subject to Globalist International world ownership ambitions, then belief in a secret war to destroy population by poison of health and deformity of mind causes us to doubt the humanity in our own makeup.

Globalism had to first concentrate on seduction of the USA because, as the most powerful economic and armed force on earth, the USA must first be economically crippled and sedated. Leadership inserted by 'cuckoo' of party-politics is then spread to influence the rest of the world. To follow this lead was easy for Canada and Australia but Europe, with longer cultural history, tended to lag a little, this lag is seen in their greater trust of traditional natural medications.

Human life is built on principles and by obeying the principles of our construction we live healthy, satisfying and productive lives. As is often pointed out, health-wise we are what we eat; the health of bodies depends about 90% on what we put into them.

It is equally true (and should be equally obvious) that the health of our behaviour depends on what is put into our minds. Basic mind food is usually called philosophy or religion.

All entitled to the term "human" have a philosophy or religion. Those who deny this may be just denying those names – may call it their "beliefs". What we call different cultures are just those operating on belief systems that differ, in some significance, from each other. If brought up in a different culture any one of us would accept it as naturally as we accept what we are.

So far as physical health goes there are, of course, doctors in the USA who are progressive, courageous, and free minded enough to investigate outside the common teachings. However the cultural mind overall is deformed by humanist philosophy, mass media, compulsory education and law.

False culture of humanism ('ism' meaning like, or fake) restructures our beliefs. By manipulation and redirection of human nature, our animal nature is progressively encouraged and our natural human instincts and abilities are progressively misdirected and subdued.

The strengthening of our animal attributes means that we now rely on, and are devoted to animal instincts of group loyalty, self-aggrandisement and comfort; this as against our human development of moral behaviours such as honesty, self-discipline and advance of our human attributes. Advance of human morality paves the way for self-control and gives us insight to our potential for future development and continuing growth.

As result of knowledge-corruption in all areas of life, we have become enslaved to the extent that leading cultures, worldwide, are now on the brink of disintegration. Because of indoctrination we now refuse to devote ourselves to the work ethics and moral behaviour that, until so recently has maintained the advancing animal extravagances of humanist culture.

In other words, we can no longer afford to pay enough people to maintain our health-care services at a human moral level because we are not inspired to discover more than we are forced to learn, or to do more work than we are forced to do. By deceit, subversive philosophy locks us into stagnation. As numbers of sick increase, so numbers to care for them decrease. Like oil: as waste increases, demands exceed falling reserves.

This applies in all areas: Transport needs pass service abilities: Demands of miseducation compact inefficiency of service. As behaviour deteriorates we increase legal restraints until restraints exceed our ability to police them. Greed, outgrowing our production, demands our usury of foreign poverty and as this reserve is consumed we are led to adventures of destruction.

To understand our problems we must look to underlying cause: causes and consequences are partners. Growing daily more obvious is that behind cultural disintegration are world-ownership ambitions.

To achieve these ambitions the stagnant dogma of old philosophy was used to discredit it while promoting new dogma to abort human development!

This secret war includes attack on health!

It campaigns to increase sickness by lifestyle decay; forced medication; microwave-damage; nutrition-deficiency; uncaring healthcare: false philosophy; etc! (See attachments to Forum" files.) To stay healthy I found some helpful books. (From Amazon.com each costs about $20; post included) less in the USA.

Beware of alternative health books written by scam artists to take advantage of the sick, or mislead in service to Big Pharma. Genuine carers try to keep prices down: Few authors see the hidden enemy.

"Left for Dead", helps the common arteries hardening problem. This author, full of faith in today's medical system had his heart by-pass fail after given all assurances by his doctor. On the brink he tried a simple remedy he had earlier dismissed as nonsense.

Cayenne pepper cured him to the extent that he lived the lifestyle he liked for years but found out too late his life-style was not a healthy one. "Death by Deception" family finished: both books recommended.

Cayenne Pepper is probably the best available medication for keeping heart and arteries healthy but it seems that about a third of heart related deaths have other causes. I myself have arrhythmia and take (2 "00" capsules hot cayenne) occasionally to keep arteries clean and ease heart load. To slow my heart if it gets too excited I use a little pharmaceutical but so far have found no actual cure for this problem. The herb Hawthorne helps. Now finishing my life's work, I am not too concerned.

My 2nd choice is "How to fight Cancer and Win" by William L Fischer. Cancer, as known more than 20 years ago, is a disease of poor nutrition. At first it seemed it would take the medical profession many years (as with scurvy) to admit that cancer had easy solution: now clear is that Globalist ambition is the 'snake-in-the-grass'. For another solution for this Globalist (Big Pharma) created problem see attached: "A Killing Program".

Also Apricot kernels are to cancer as Cayenne pepper is to vascular system problems. Hard to get but there are many alternatives. Big Pharma, by big scam, managed to have "amygdalin" (the cancer killing agent in Apricot kernels) made illegal in the USA.

Commercial apricots are now hybrid or genetically modified but BP has not yet had natural apricot growing banned. If you have a bit of land in a suitable climate to grow your own just make sure to get graft or seed of a natural Apricot. Given sensible eating and living, a couple of trees should produce enough kernels (plus nice fruit) to protect the average family.

Now: The Worst Crime of History.

There is a lot of talk about child abuse but truth is unpopular! Never in human history have so great a proportion of human children been so badly damaged by abuse as today. No, I am not going to say its the parents fault, everyone must accept some responsibility for giving the worst of mankind the power of government; nor are national governments the prime culprits though they are the instrument of its introduction and legalising. The main blame rests securely with Globalist-planned cultural war.

Basically: children from the earliest age are today saturated and soaked in artificial sexual stimulation and greed of self-aggrandisement! This forcing of premature sexual development probably further enhanced by use of growth hormones (given to speed livestock growth) now more restrained but too late.

Damage is also increased by the drugs culture; confusions of deceitful philosophy; addiction to novelty technology and "forced medications". See Global Warming series attachments:.

It was not until after WW2 that I met someone who used a banned drug or had pointed out to me someone thought to be homosexual. It would probably be another ten years before the publicity for promotion of sexual deformity and drugs (disguised as warning against) became massive.

Remember the wise old saying "All publicity is good publicity"? Drugs and promiscuity, as though by magic, then became street-wise lifestyle.

People of deformed attitude, apologists (thinking themselves liberated) called moral crimes 'victimless'. We now see the consequences of this sneaky deceit.

The deforming of human behaviour, by whatever means, or in whatever form it takes, is a crime against humanity now visibly causing serious and growing (family to international) repercussions. Christian scriptures warn against leading children astray and in truth, those who do so would be better off if tied to a millstone and thrown into the ocean.

Today, in many towns and once respectable city suburbs, children as young as nine or ten are getting drunk and little girls 'laid' at binge drinking parties.

What, forty years ago would have been considered pornographic, is now not just family TV viewing but massively promoted as smart lifestyle. Although children below age of 16 may be legally denied right to questionable 'adult' activities, encouragement is clearly 'allowed' and unrestrained unless some participants are adult. Crime, both civil and moral, is now openly promoted as childish behaviour, Mental deformity's inflicted on children today not only force premature sex development but also, with help of childish distractions, aborts maturing years. With maturity curtailed few can reach their full potential. Many fail to become competent adults and educators (advanced education) complain of student immaturity.

However it seems some, seeing sex as body function rather than life's goal, also avoid frustrations and the drugs cult. That these escape the most damaging consequences must be frustrating to the manipulators.

The true form of present Government is: a "Pornocracy"! Globalism, powered by control of finance and deceit of children, must surely rank as the most contemptible crime syndicate of all history.

A cosmetics report from HSI (Jan. 4th. '08).

Quote: "Even products for infants are part of the cosmetic mix. In fact, last year a group called Campaign for Safe Cosmetics issued a press release to warn consumers about several popular children's bath products that contain a cancer-causing petrochemical with the cumbersome name of 1,4-Dioxane. This chemical is considered a probable human carcinogen and a proven animal carcinogen. Johnson's Baby Wash, Sesame Street Bubble Bath, and Hello Kitty Bubble Bath are all reported to contain 1,4-Dioxane.

Of course, you can always check cosmetic labels to see if they contain 1,4-Dioxane, parabens, phthalates, BHT, and other worrisome chemicals (including formaldehyde and sodium laureth sulfate). But keep in mind that neither the FDA nor any other agency requires cosmetic companies to fully list the contents of products." End Quote.

Discussion article:

"YOUR LIFE – 7: A Revelation for our times.

"The REVELATION of John"

We should now begin to realize the Christian Revelation is written allegorically by inspiration and its challenge is to confirm or mark, various stages of our intellectual development. As intellect develops our ability to understand develops. Given inspiration, we interpret within the limits of our language and development. Inspiration must retain meaning for us until resolved, if not it risks being discarded.

Language and understanding is now far advanced from that of ancient times but having allowed ourselves to be deceived we now try to avoid correct understanding. We try to avoid understanding of truth because it is painful to find that what we think we know – what we have been taught to believe – is a load of irrational nonsense.

We are now challenged (undeniable by intellect) to see that "Revelation", as in the New Testament, is (in logic) closely related to the truth in New Testament Parables. We should love truth: If we love truth we will always work to know truth better. Truth is not a thing to be grasped in its entirety; Truth is the substance of life's infinite development.

We are now in the time of the parable of the farmer in whose field an enemy planted seed of weed where the farmer had planted seed for harvest. Here we find the farmer telling his staff to wait for the crop to ripen before pulling the weed and burning it. To logic this is clearly the same harvest as ripe for harvest in Revelation. We are now enabled to understand that this is a harvest of human development – that the weed of deceit is due to be gathered and destroyed.

Nearing the end-time of this period, we see that we destroy the evil that was sown in our minds. We are also told of the structure behind planting of this evil; it is the "City of Commerce" that lives off us by usury and produces nothing but confusion and corruption.

We are told it is brought down – that the traders and Captains of ships will be devastated by how quickly the "City of Commerce" (Great Whore of Revelation) is brought down. Read for yourself Revelation 18, in your language – read the New Testament with understanding – see "GNIEB><BEING" for some enlargement, no need of repeat here.

You, who have eyes to see and ears to hear, will observe that Revelation (deformed by time and developing language) becomes easy to interpret as its time arrives and intellect develops.

To develop intellect we avoid lazy attachment to stagnant dogma and search for truth! Learning discloses that every THING – every bottle, every chair: every seed every hair; only exists in the truth of its order. Lacking truth in order nothing exists – energy is free – and dead.

Some forecast in "Revelation" is now clearly applicable to us today and only in simple ignorance can we believe that, so long ago, any human could have the knowledge and wisdom for such forecast. Our present situation was then quite beyond human belief or understanding.

So let us seek to know truth better, for truth is the facilitator, the Mother of life! Only love of truth leads to life and to increasing development of life.

I feel that these matters are now sufficiently covered; it is not for me to try to convince those of contrary nature who want to destroy the human development.

This, I expect, may be the last of these writings though time may remain for some clarification. We should be afraid of truth only in our denial of it – only in the sense of not loving it enough to always want to know it better. Revelation confirms this – as life we forever bow to truth.

The work directed to bringing these matters to public attention (Heading "Promotion") is responsibility of those to benefit; but let me help. We no longer have excuse for believing the nonsense woven into today's culture by authorities blinded or deceived by selfish greed. Let us be alert to the reality of our potential and our need to defend it. We close with recent comment by other workers.

Attachment 1.

A Killing Program! This report may be considered incredible until we know two facts: First:

1. That cancer is a disease of poor nutrition.
2. That the Globalist establishment wants us dead.

Natural foods contain a huge variety of nutrients! Today, foods including fruit and vegetables are often low or deficient in nutrients because of poor soil and use of artificial fertilizers. They usually also contain trace of chemicals used against insects and diseases that destroy or blemish; add to this that if processed, much of any remaining nutrient is destroyed and replaced by artificial flavours and preservatives.

When you buy oil for cooking you may think it contains the valuable nutrients of the original plant; in fact it may contain none to very little. For the nutrients and none of the harmful chemicals used to 'purify' natural oils, you have to pay more for less-processed VIRGIN cold pressed organic and check for maker assurances of low cold-pres temperatures. No law against hidden killers: big warnings against healthy sunlight and worldwide attempts, to bring essential vitamins and minerals under chemicals controls.

This is not about money. Two of three in the USA and Australia die of cancer, heart attack or medical error. Very few now die of natural causes. Those who take an interest see that 4 of 5 causes of deaths could be avoided with huge saving of money. Early death cost is high; how much higher the cost of disablement?

Natural foods, vitamins and mineral, easily give a 77% chance of avoiding cancer. The following research report is not a breakthrough. Its real value is to show how easy it is to avoid cancer if you take serious interest in your health and avoid the manipulations of those we empower: warning: If changing to a natural sunny lifestyle please adapt intelligently.

Note also: this author, as others quoted in this series of inserts, fails to see the evil behind the money. The money myth is promoted indoctrination! Money is a bribe for the workers and is important for its giving credence to the belief that manipulation is about money. What is behind cultural manipulation is a real war for possession of this earth.

School Views: Helps expose the sowing of deceit in our early development. Many parents today accept what is happening: they, left defenceless by parents over-whelmed by mass media, corrupt law and money now accept what is claimed as advance of human development. When led to see ourselves as animals we seem never to tire of impressing animal beauty on our children; but 'deformity of care' endangers them.

School views exposes a system now under control of governments under control of globalist finance. We, over the last fifty or sixty years have been led (by exposure of its stagnation) to distrust established religion but in its place were encouraged to worship wealth and our animal instincts. The seduction to evade human self-discipline is evident in all areas: civil service, mass media, law, hospital care, etc.

Animals, being genetically limited, lack potential for self-development! Humans, though physically born, by age three learn language for self-awareness and development of spirit. By fully grown we can develop self-understanding to gain significant control of individual behaviour and future. Those who advance will create the simple life-structures as needed.

Through School Views we see how blasphemy of human development is quickly spread through all areas of culture, but this perfection of abuse is not yet universal; many schools, both in the USA and abroad, still lag. However, universal new-age teaching of the '3Rs' has produced such restraint of development and evasion of self-discipline as to show how short is the step remaining! Our escape time is limited.

Humanist religion enslaves to deny human progress. So while the level of degeneracy revealed is not yet universal it is well established in advanced nations. Cultural inefficiency is easier to disguise and police in large schools but downgrading of basics is now widespread and well advanced.

Human abilities rebel against fixations of animal behaviour and many children suffer intellectual conflict. Frustrated by intellectual need and denied vital basics, they become self-destructive; seek escape through use of drugs; commit suicide; or turn in despair to social violence.

Deceit was introduced with such sly promotion that few saw its significance. Even when we see our behaviour is not human-natural, or that animal basics leave us open to deceit, we miss natural consequences. Precise language is a human essential!

Whole word recognition has ancient limitations. Forced on children, the flexibility that allowed technological progress through easy expression and sharing of advancing concepts, is lost. School Views exposes how deformities infect every aspect of community.

Attachment 3:

Your Money: This speaker knows his subject well but when it comes to its interpretation in relation to our situation we find he also fails logical explanation. Like the community in general, he does not appreciate that present culture is a Globalist manipulation. Life despises stagnation! False finance or "fiat" money can only continue indefinitely by control; but manipulators dictate alternate outcomes!

At the time of this radio discussion the mortgage-squeeze was already causing growing distress. Yes, money was falling in value and although wages/profits were keeping pace with price inflation to the extent of everyday essentials, not enough to allow repayments for extravagant housing. A natural ethic called "Buyer Beware" is well known but the equally important "lender beware" is ignored. Lenders were encouraged to ignore all responsibility and the "Great Whore of Commerce" is largely free of legal restraint.

The miseducated assume lenders know what they are doing and won't make loans they know cannot be repaid. Miss-educated employees also, but the owners of banks certainly know! Since the beginning of Gulf War 11, huge amounts of USA printed paper has been sent overseas for pay (or bribe). Overseas exchange is accepted as honest, just as at home: this financial trickery is designed for specific results: national and international.

Why now? Well you will have to ask the heads of those families we here call Globalists; they who have tricked the world into selling its most valuable assets for worthless paper? Timing is critical: Is financial chaos part of a final assault or is this a feint? So long as they control us, distress will grow.

You KNOW these are not honest caring people! You KNOW our world is drifting into a pit of pain and suffering! Why is search for more oil to create more pollution, still encouraged? What do you think will happen if/when, in a world saturated with hate and armaments, increase of erratic global weather reduces food production by half?

Attachment 4: Next we quote a Dr. Douglas Report. He reveals breakthrough developments exposing the Fluoridation crime that helps undermine our health. So many professionals see problems as isolated in their profession and miss, or fear to expose, the criminal.

Can Globalist planning be completed with the advent of Global Warming? Does Globalism still need to follow its original plan? Is the plan still viable?

Attachment 5: This revelation requires a fast Internet connection: it exposes the essentials about the origin of oil and global warming not being highlighted.

A reminder from Christian Gospels: Satan invites Jesus to throw himself from a high place to prove who he is as ancient texts say that the angels will protect Him from harm. But Jesus replies that we are also told not to put our God to the test.

We have responsibilities and should not take advice or instructions out of natural context! We are given intelligence to take responsibility; don't expect salvation for evasion of duty. To borrow from a tempting lender you buy a loan: Buyer Beware! Who forces us to elect those who say: "Trust me; I'll look after you"?

We learn of more things not publicised. Coincidentally we see an Earth created by intelligence – construction waste turned into resources for human development – landscaped – temperature control set up. Our development began only when all completed. As by good parents, we, in adolescence were warned of dangers. Development challenges were provided; ideals revealed: revelations of future given.

Discussion files consist of two series: "Your Life" & "Global Warm-ing, Warn-ing or War-ing"

Both include revealing attachments; (recent comment from other researchers). Five attached at the "Your Life" file, the rest to the "Global Warming" file.

I dare you to read these files and still think you can trust governments that claim democracy but exclude democratic principles from their election – to still think it safe to leave your life's potential in the hands of liars? For earlier background literature go to: www.themindweb.com or www.lifetruth.org.au

To Continue see "Global Warming.

Congratulations on your perseverance: Ed.
